"Whatever is good proves to be the more divine and the more useful, the more it is known, and it becomes so most effectively by the spread of good books."

Pope Innocent VIII., in the year 1487.

"The world's spiritual wealth, so far as it has existence other than in the minds of individuals, is stored in literature, in books—the great treasure-house of the soul's life and whoever fails to make himself a home in this realm of truth, light and freedom, is shut out from what is highest and most divine in human experience, and sinks into the grave without having lived."

Bishop Spalding.
